THE CONSCRIPTION LAWS.

Letter from the Governor of Pennsylvania to the President of the United States.
HARRISBURG, 20th January, 1865.
SIR: The Act of the 3d of March, 1863, concerning the Enrollment, and the Enrollment Act provided (section 4) that for the purposes of the Act, each Congressional District of the respective States should form a District, and (sec. 11) that all persons enrolled should be subject to be called into the Military Service of the United States, and to continue in service during the present rebellion, not however exceeding the term of three years, and further (sec. 12) that in assigning to the Districts the number of men to be furnished therefrom, the President should take into consideration the number of Volunteers for the respective States in the several States in which said Districts were situated, and the period of their service since the commencement of the rebellion, and should so make said assignments as to equalize the numbers among the Districts of the several States, considering the number of the numbers already furnished as aforesaid and the time of their service.

The time of actual service which by this Act you were directed to consider and allow, for (indeed not without impracticable labor, or indeed not at all) be fixed with exactitude for each District, but it could not have been so approximated by averages that little if any practical injustice would have been done. The commencement of the third year of the war was close at hand at the time of the passage of the Act. It would not have been difficult to ascertain, of one thousand men enlisted for three years, what was the average number that remained actually in the service at the end of the first and second years respectively, and thus the Act could have been substantially complied with. For instance, suppose that of the one thousand men of one thousand men enlisted for three years, there remained in the service an average of forty per cent. at the close of the first year, and twenty per cent. at the close of the second year. The result would have been, under the provisions of the Act, that sixteen hundred men would have been taken as the equivalent of one thousand and three years' men.

Unfortunately the Heads of Bureaus, to whom the matter seems to have been entrusted, began by falling into a strange misconception of the Act. They did in effect strike from the 12th section the phrases "period of their service" and "time of their service," and insert in lieu thereof the phrase "term of their enlistment," and then proceeded to apportion credits by multiplying the number of men furnished from a district by the number of years for which they were enlisted. Calculations made on this basis were of course most extravagant, and the people everywhere felt that somehow injustice was being done. In the attempt to soften this, numerous contradictory orders have been issued from the Provost Marshal General's Office, and long essays by himself and others have been in vain published to explain and justify their action.

In fact, as soon as they got beyond the morally certain limit of the actual service of the man, their calculation has no longer a practical basis. Its principle, carried to a legitimate extreme, would justify the enlistment of one man for 50,000 years, and crediting him as the whole quota of the State, with a small excess.

Surely every reasonable man can say for himself whether he has found credit on the quota of one pair of boots for three years is practically equivalent to getting three pairs of boots for one year.

The visionary character of the system on which they have proceeded cannot be better illustrated than by the result at which they have arrived on the present occasion. The quota of Pennsylvania on the last call was announced to be 66,999 men. On the 24th inst. it was announced that the quota of the Western District had, on revision, been fixed at 22,543, which would make that of the whole State about 44,000, and late on the same day it was further announced that the quota of the Western District was 25,512, and that on the whole State 49,583; all these changes being caused by no intervening circumstances that are aware of. Let our quota on the last call was fixed, and there can be no deficiency to be now supplied.

There are little wood-crowned hills,
There are feeble, lowly saplings,
Fanned by the breeze, and especially those
God, who creates by soul and senses,
Loves and prospers you and me;
For to Him all vain distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.
Telling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth or fame;
Till hands be joined in one,
And fed with food the same;
By the sweat of others' foreheads,
Living only to rejoice,
When the poor man's outraged freedom
Vainly lifts up his voice.
Truth and justice are eternal,
Built with love and light,
Secret wrong shall never prosper;
While there is a man's right;
God, whose word heard voice is singing
Roundless love to you and me,
Sinks oppression with its lies,
As the pebbles in the sea.

THE CONSCRIPTION LAWS.

Letter from the Governor of Pennsylvania to the President of the United States.
HARRISBURG, 20th January, 1865.
SIR: The Act of the 3d of March, 1863, concerning the Enrollment, and the Enrollment Act provided (section 4) that for the purposes of the Act, each Congressional District of the respective States should form a District, and (sec. 11) that all persons enrolled should be subject to be called into the Military Service of the United States, and to continue in service during the present rebellion, not however exceeding the term of three years, and further (sec. 12) that in assigning to the Districts the number of men to be furnished therefrom, the President should take into consideration the number of Volunteers for the respective States in the several States in which said Districts were situated, and the period of their service since the commencement of the rebellion, and should so make said assignments as to equalize the numbers among the Districts of the several States, considering the number of the numbers already furnished as aforesaid and the time of their service.

The time of actual service which by this Act you were directed to consider and allow, for (indeed not without impracticable labor, or indeed not at all) be fixed with exactitude for each District, but it could not have been so approximated by averages that little if any practical injustice would have been done. The commencement of the third year of the war was close at hand at the time of the passage of the Act. It would not have been difficult to ascertain, of one thousand men enlisted for three years, what was the average number that remained actually in the service at the end of the first and second years respectively, and thus the Act could have been substantially complied with. For instance, suppose that of the one thousand men of one thousand men enlisted for three years, there remained in the service an average of forty per cent. at the close of the first year, and twenty per cent. at the close of the second year. The result would have been, under the provisions of the Act, that sixteen hundred men would have been taken as the equivalent of one thousand and three years' men.

Unfortunately the Heads of Bureaus, to whom the matter seems to have been entrusted, began by falling into a strange misconception of the Act. They did in effect strike from the 12th section the phrases "period of their service" and "time of their service," and insert in lieu thereof the phrase "term of their enlistment," and then proceeded to apportion credits by multiplying the number of men furnished from a district by the number of years for which they were enlisted. Calculations made on this basis were of course most extravagant, and the people everywhere felt that somehow injustice was being done. In the attempt to soften this, numerous contradictory orders have been issued from the Provost Marshal General's Office, and long essays by himself and others have been in vain published to explain and justify their action.

In fact, as soon as they got beyond the morally certain limit of the actual service of the man, their calculation has no longer a practical basis. Its principle, carried to a legitimate extreme, would justify the enlistment of one man for 50,000 years, and crediting him as the whole quota of the State, with a small excess.

Surely every reasonable man can say for himself whether he has found credit on the quota of one pair of boots for three years is practically equivalent to getting three pairs of boots for one year.

The visionary character of the system on which they have proceeded cannot be better illustrated than by the result at which they have arrived on the present occasion. The quota of Pennsylvania on the last call was announced to be 66,999 men. On the 24th inst. it was announced that the quota of the Western District had, on revision, been fixed at 22,543, which would make that of the whole State about 44,000, and late on the same day it was further announced that the quota of the Western District was 25,512, and that on the whole State 49,583; all these changes being caused by no intervening circumstances that are aware of. Let our quota on the last call was fixed, and there can be no deficiency to be now supplied.

A WOMAN WITH TWO HUSBANDS.

(From the Chattanooga Gazette.)

Some time last fall, a soldier belonging to the 34 Wisconsin battery, doing duty in the garrison, in this city, married a woman living a few miles from town, who already had a husband living, he being a rebel and a prisoner at Camp Chase, Ohio. The soldier went to Wisconsin during the month of October, was mustered out of the service, and immediately returned here and went to his wife's to live. A few days ago the rebel husband, who had taken the oath of allegiance, returned to this place, and on going to what he believed to be his own home, was surprised to find a Yankee in possession of both his wife and property. He endeavored to take the Yankee and enter his own home, but was unable to effect anything, as his wife took sides with her Yankee husband, and refused to leave him.

The affair culminated in a suit before Justice Allen, brought by the rebel to recover the value of a ring which he claimed he had left at home, when he went into the rebel army. The Justice tried to make her understand that her first husband was her legal spouse, but she did not care for that. To her argument of his return, she replied, "Yes, but I like the Yankee the best!" Finding that it was of no avail to try to induce his wife to return to his bed and home, the rebel husband determined to take something from the wreck of his fortunes, and said to the Yankee, "Well, you may keep the money, if you pay me twenty-five dollars for the key." "I'll pay you," responded the other, and the bargain was concluded on the spot. After the payment the rebel departed from the Justice's office each apparently well satisfied with the result.

PELICK INTERVIEW.—The following story is told to illustrate the remarkable instinct of the feline tribe: Mr. Blipheim, the famous Saxon dentist, had a valuable toothache shell cat that for days did nothing but mow. Guessing the cause, he looked into its mouth, and seeing a decayed tooth he soon relieved it of its pain. The following day there were at least ten cats at his door, the day after twenty; and they went on increasing at such a rate that he was obliged to keep a bull dog to drive them away. But nothing could help him. A cat that had the toothache would come any number of miles to see him. However, being one morning very nervous, he accidentally broke the jaw of an old tabby. The news of this spread like wildfire, and not a single cat ever came to him afterwards.

A GALLANT PEELER.—As a lady of great personal beauty was walking along a narrow lane she perceived, just behind her, a hawk of earth-brown, driving an ass with two panniers laden with his stock in trade. To give the animal and his master room to pass, the lady suddenly stepped aside, which so frightened the donkey that he ran away, and had not proceeded far when he fell, and a great part of the crockery was broken. The lady, in her turn, became alarmed, lest the man should load her with abuse, if not to insult her; but he merely exclaimed, "Never mind, madam; Balaam's ass was frightened by an angel!"
